Fant: this is a federal civil rights class action claim brought by eleven individual plaintiffs on behalf of a class of literally thousands of other potential class plaintiffs arising from the allegedly unconstitutional practices of the Ferguson jail, municipal court and police department. When suit was first filed, the allegations in the complaint on behalf of several plaintiffs were identified as potentially invoking coverage for at least some of the plaintiffs' claims and the suit was answered and defended by SLAIT defense counsel. Over the course of the past year the scope of the case grew and the predominant focus of the case became the plaintiffs' class action claim. Concern grew when a similar suit was recently settled for what we believe is substantial amount of money. With mediation now scheduled, we believe a DJ suit to determine coverage may be necessary.
